It is thought by several, and with good reason. that the Governor allows the people to believe that the island will not be handed over to the Japanese without a struggle and also continues all land from wheave they came or were allowed to hang about the towns with no occupation. The rows and riots that have lately occurred show that these men are only too willing to attack their own people if there is any advantage to begained. However, it is more generally believed that the Governor is sincere and that the island will not be handed over to the Japanese until they take forcibie possession and it is my opinion that the 17th of July, if the Japanese arrive that day, will mark the beginning of a straggle fur the greatest and the most dispetrous in its result of the whole war. - N. THE STRAITS SETTLEMENTS. Dear Vanity .-- I have read your remarks upon the Straits Settlements with pleasure, but it seems to me that if I am too sunguine of a victory for Singapore you and Mr. W. H. Read evr also in under-estimating the difficulties of determining the reasonable amount to be paid by the Colonials as a military contribution. sounds simple enough to say that Singa pore shall pay a fuir share of the cost Imperial defence, but it appears to me that th question what is a fair share cannot be settled until we know exactly what is (1) the cost of defending British interests in all parts of the world (2) the proportion of defence which each part of the empire requires according to its situation and trade; and (S) the ability of the inhabitants to pay. Through the absence of any regular system based on such a calculation, the difficulty with the Straits Settlements has arisen; and as Sir John Colomb remarked in the House o Commons four years ago, until such a system exists "injustice must be done and dissatis-faction created." This is not a matter which concerns Singapore and the Colonial Office alone. It is the root of Imperial Federation, but so far as I am aware no one among those who are working for that end has ever made that calculation or planned a scheme for its application. In that I may be wrong. If so, possibly you or your readers can set me right.

I do not imagine for one moment that the Departmental Committee on the Straits Military Contribution will proceed upon" these lines. but I am content to await their report, which may provide a temporary settlement.
